

Parents as Partners:

Engaging Families in College and Career Planning and Preparation

Join the Indiana Youth Institute as we host a nationally recognized training.

This highly interactive and practical workshop will leave you with new strategies for engaging families in college and career planning. Get help with family engagement – one of the most difficult aspects of youth work for school- and community-based practitioners alike.

Research continues to show that when families are engaged in their children's education, students are better prepared for long-term success, postsecondary education and careers. Yet, environments that foster authentic partnerships with families cannot be constructed overnight. Based on more than 16 years of experience working in the field of family and community engagement, including with low-income, immigrant and communities of color, this professional learning opportunity will provide participants with strategies on how to create meaningful partnerships with families that improve youth outcomes.
